DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 4 is objected to because of the following informalities: applicant recites the pattern as being made "from a notch of the marking board", as recited it is not understood how a pattern is made from a single notch of the marking board since a notch, as such, is singular and cannot represent a pattern. Furthermore, as shown in figure 7, the indicium appears to be several notches not a singular notch. Appropriate correction is required.
2. As best understood, the following rejection applies.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-2,4,6-8,10,14,15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Chu (6,279,170).
3. Chu discloses a display (20) and a display base (28) comprising a housing (10, col.3 lines 66-67 and col. 4 lines 1-5) and a marking board (22) installed inside the housing and connected to the housing in a detachable manner (col. 4 lines 2-5); a pattern is formed on the marking board (col. 2 lines 24-31); the pattern being made from a notch of the marking board (Chu discloses etching as a method of forming the display pattern which inherently includes at least one notch for forming the display); the display base further comprises a luminous module installed inside the housing base for lighting the marking board (LED's 28); with regards to the marking board comprising a plurality of nicks for dispersing the light emitted from the luminous module, etching, as described by applicant inherently encompasses a plurality of nicks in the marking board 22; the luminous module comprises a plurality of light emitting diodes (col. 2 lines 43-46); the display further comprises a light control module for controlling the energy of light emitted by the luminous module (microprocessor 32 and driver circuits 34, provide for a light control module within the display, col. 2 lines 57-67); the housing of the display base is made of a wear-resisting material (Chu discloses the display components contained within a water tight encasement made from an electrometric material which is considered by the examiner to be "wear resistant"); the display base further comprises a power module for supplying electric power for the luminous module (col. 3 lines 52-54).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chu.

6. Chu discloses the claimed invention except for the recitation of the pattern including a mist surface. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to implement a "mist surface" in the device of Chu since a surface that produces diffused light when light from the source emits through the surface is old and well known in the illumination art for use in light display devices that have LCD displays such as that of Chu. A diffuser provides an even light distribution, which is desirable feature for LCD display devices.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 5,9,11,12,13 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

8. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The prior art cited does not teach the pattern of the display device being made form a flange of the marking board, a first and second electrical connecting port, the display is a plasma television, the display is a LCD television, the display base is made of a transparent material.

Conclusion

9. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Blonder et al , May, Merrill et al .
